OUTLOOK FOR THE WEEK

This week investors should consider sectors with high upside potentials based on strength of earnings and fundamentals as corporate earnings release season is now in full swing. We expect positive sentiments to continue to drive the market as companies post strong financials and the government says it as flatten the curve of the second wave of coronvirus, but is concerned about a third wave which can come as a result of variants in the COVID-19 virus from other countries.

However, investors should be weary of inflation prone sectors or companies as prices of goods and services continue to tick up with increase in electricity tarrif expected announced by NERC. Meanwhie, Nigeria is set to receive another batch of COVID-19 vaccines and its expected that more people will be vaccinated and economic activities will continue to be on the increase.
